PICTURES FOR THE PORTRAIT SHOW.

The Artists' and Executive committees of the Portrait Show, which will open at the National Academy of Design, on December 14, for the bene-fit of the Orthopedic Hospital, are constantly receiving offers of unsolicited pictures. While these offers are appreciated, it would be impossible to accept them, even if all the works were of the artistic character or social interest which alone would warrant their acceptance. Certainly, not more than four hundred paintings can be hung to advantage in the galleries of the academy, and, as previously announced, the Portrait Show this year, unlike its preferessors of 1894 and 1895, will be entirely an invitation affair. Only those paintings which the management has sejected as most thely to lend special attractiveness to the exhibtwill be asked for or admitted, and, so far, the success attending the efforts of the committees

Thanksgiving brought the usual fortune to the theatres-moderately good houses in the afternoon, in most cases, and large ones in the evening. noon, in most cases, and large ones in the evening, it proved again to be one of the best themrical nights of the year. A few houses were not quite full, but the most overflowed, and in several the fire law was violated by the placing of chaits it the aisles. At several of the theatres all, or practically all, of the seats were sold for last night several days in advance.

A careful estimate of the loss places the total at $1,500,000, on which at the outside there was ever $150,000 insurance. The insurance carried on the hotel was ridiculously small. The reason for this lay in the high rat charged and the fact that the underwriters die not care to carry a large line on such a building, built of wood and brick, with no brick dividing the wall, and but one outside wall of brick. The insurance on the stocks of goods in the burned structure and their fittings amounts to $72,250. George A. Moss carried $2,800; Hyman & Myers, $30,500; Isaac Grant, of the drug store, $5,000; J. J. Groon, $3,000; M. A. Gunst & Co., $10,000; J. THE PATRONAGE OF THE HOUSE.

LVITH CONGRESS.

Washington, Nov. 24 (Special) -The political calculators are at work figuring on the offices in the House. One of them said to-day:

Take the losses East-Massachusetts 2, New-York 12, New-Jersey 2, Pennsylvania 6, Maryland 2, Virginia 3, North Carolina 1, West Virginia 1, Kentucky 1, total, 2e. The gains West are California 2, Kansas 5, Okishoma 1, Michigan 2, South Daketa 2, Washington 2, Wyonning 2; total, 17, Calculating only the sections named, this would leave thirteen places to be provided over and above the present arrangement. In the LVth Congress the following States west of Pennsylvania and New-York are represented in the distribution of the offices of the House: California, Illineis, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri and Ohio, Now it is said Minnesota will ask for a new deal. That statement is absolutely incorrect. There will be no general reorganization of the House offices, but the adjustments that are made every Congress in proportion to the representation of Republican States will occur. States that have lost members will lose offices to those which have gained members, in the LVth Congress, the patronage will be larger for each member, there will be more to go around. There will not be the same embarransanch as to places as existed in the two former Congresses.

counsel to examine critically the evidence taken by the Commission. The general interpretation put upon Judge Countryman's duties has been that he is to learn if the people's money has been wrongfully expended, and whether any criminal prosecutions should follow.

Judge Countryman has had many weeks for the examination of the evidence, and it is expected that he will shortly make his conclusions public. Shortly before the Republican State Convention was held, when it was considered that Judge Countryman's report might have some political effect, Governor Black was asked about the possibility of its publication before the con-

There are some indications, however, that Judge Countryman is beginning to frame his report, and may possibly have advised Governor Black of some of his conclusions. He has reby the Canal Commission. It is strongly susits explanation the fact that he also is examining carefully the evidence taken by the Cana Commission. It may be stated on authority that the Governor, ever since he commissioned Judge Countryman to undertake this work, has intended to go over the Judge's report with him

Renewed interest was taken in Judge Country man's proceedings by politicians to-day, upon their learning that he had obtained a copy of the bond given by George W. Aldridge as Superintendent of Public Works. This is a bond for $50,000 to protect the State. The State Treasurer, in accordance with a State law, advances to the Superintendent of Public Works his department. This $30,000 is subject to the individual check of the Superintendent of Public Works, and therefore he is required to give a bond for $50,000 to protect the State. Mr. Aldridge's bonismen are Frederick Cook, of Rochester, ex-Secretary of State, a prominent Democrat and capitalist of Western New-York. Henry C. Brewster, of Rochester. Both Mr. Cook and Mr. Brewster qualified to the amount of $50,000, and thus th State is amply protected. WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY AT "SEA. From Syren and Shipping.

From Syren and Shipping.

Obviously, the chief interest to us attaching to Signor Marconi's invention is the question of its applicability to vessels at sea. Can they be enabled to telegraph to other vessels or to the shore, and if so, can they do so under circumstances of creating and utility. It goes without saying that Signor Marconi himself, together with his Bourd of Directors—principally sanguine Irishmen—has every faith in the applicability of the invention to all sorts and conditions of things. Mr. Preece, the intermediate of the saying matter than the results effected, we prefer to keep an open mind as to the litness of the system to meet the requirements of shipping.

The area thereworthy practical test of the inthe system to meet the requirements of shipping.

The first nortworthy practical test of the invention in matters nautical was at the Kingstown Regatta, in July last, when the details of a yacht race were successfully wited as they transpired. Since then exteriments have also been made at Hournemouth and at Alum Bay in the Isle of Wight. These two stations are eighteen mics apart, and the electrical communication between them is said to be perfect. Lord Kelvin visited the Alum Bay station and sent messages—we presume to Bournemouth, whence they were transmitted by ordinary land wires. We believe, too, that the Carisbrooke Castle, on her first voyage, was signalled by the new system from Bournemouth. Experiments made in the Bristol Channel were successful as were others in which a transmitting apparatus was fitted on a tur. Further, an installation put up for 'Lloyd's,' between Rathlin Island and Bully Castle, is said to work satisfactorily.

Thus it would appear that the invention is ap-and and Bully Castle, is said to work satisfactorily.

Thus it would appear that the invention is applicable in the case of outlying stations, from which passing vessels may be signalled. We understand that the electrical pulsations or vibrations can pass through any condition of atmosphere—e. their transmission is altogether independent of wind, hall, rain, snow or fog. From this it has been suggested that the system will enable vessels overtaken by thick weather in a crowded waterway to signal their course and helm movements to craft in their vicinity. But against this contention there are very obvious objections. In the first place, as we understand the matter, the receipt of a message—that its supposing, of course, that the two vessels concerned were duly fitted with transmitting and receiving apparatus—would afford no evidence whatever as to the point from which it had been dispatched. The waves or impulse travel, we take it, through space, and like all other forces emanating from a point, will diminish in intensity with distance from that centre. Thus, their radiation would of necessity prevent the receiving vessel from forming a conclusion as to the exact location of the producing
